2.3 Teaching-Learning Process

2.3.1 Student centric methods, such as experiential learning, participative learning and problem solving methodologies are used for enhancing learning experiences using ICT Tools.

Answer:

Student-centric learning methods are introduced as a hub-spoke model in Chandigarh Engineering College, Jhanjeri, Mohali, where teaching-learning activities to meet curricular requirements are carried out by academic departments, CEC, Jhanjeri, has provided the facilities to involve students in co-creation of various learning modules, delivering additional lectures/courses through peer-learning and build confidence levels of the students.

Academic interventions for enhancing experiential learning, problem solving abilities are addressed through innovative curricular components such as

1. Embedded courses – where theory and practical components are taught simultaneously /parallel to understand concepts.
2. Simulation based experiments in laboratories, industry sponsored facilities with commercial scale experiments (Departments-Electronics, Mechanical, Computer Science, Civil, AIML, AI&DS).
3. Workshops with computer-based learning–CAD, Rapid Proto typing, CNC machines, CAM and Simulation-and-animation oriented learning wherever applicable.
4. Activities of Clubs and Societies, Department Associations bring additional values in understanding emerging trends in collaboration with relevant agencies.
5. Industrial visits/field visits/visits to industrial fairs are organised to appreciate new developments in their domains.
6. Internships for a period ranging between one-week to one-semester are provided during winter/summer vacation or to carry-out capstone projects in industry.

Participative learning are deployed in three different ways–

1. Students joining with faculty members in executing projects funded by the industries, Government agencies there by providing opportunity to understand higher level concepts in their domains, get hands-on experience in handling equipment, instruments and machines.

2. Handling the classes to the junior students by seniors, mentoring by alumni after college hours in learning analytical subjects, laboratory courses, preparation for competitive examinations,
3. Short courses, lectures, workshops and demonstration sessions are organised by senior students to freshmen and second year students – to gain the field knowledge.

Problem Solving, in the context of society and the Nation, is given attention during entire learning cycle of the students through systematic efforts, which includes,

1. Offering courses that leads to diagnosing a problem and providing solutions –Engineering Clinic
2. Project Based Learning with a cohort for nurturing advanced learners.
3. Semester-long, multi-discipline group-based teams solve complex engineering problems –Protosem, with/without sponsorship from industries.
4. Tutorial component is introduced in the analytical courses, wherever required.
5. Intramural hackathons are organised by departments to enhance the learning experience, implement the understanding and improving abilities of students to provide solutions to complex problems.
6. Designing and developing new products to participate in various competitions, solving problems related to the CEC, Jhanjeri - Campus (faculty attendance – touch free system, campus sanitation, Smart Apps., etc.,)
7. Pre-placement internships in companies to solve problems assigned to student teams (individual/group projects) and

Executing capstone projects which necessitates careful planning, executing and finalising various activities using technical tools, software and new/novel materials for solving a problem chosen.
